TOP FIVE: TO TASTE

JAM SESSION
Canned jellies from Sissy's Southern Kitchen & Bar

1 Village Baking Company's artisan breads and fresh pastries are so moist and delicious, they'll instantly transport you to a little French cafe. Baguettes, puffed pastries, pies, croissants and jams keep Dallasites calling. villagebakingco.com

Global Peace Factory, owned by interior design guru Michelle Nussbaumer's husband Bernard, serves up prime Italian java. Extra cool: a portion of each cup's profits benefit charitable causes. globalpeacefactory.com

Wackym's Kitchen bakes its delectable cookie treats from scratch with fresh ingredients like real butter, pure cane sugar and unbleached flour, but without artificial flavorings or preservatives. We can't get enough of the flavors of the season, hot apple pie, and chocolate snickerdoodle. wackymskitchen.com

3

Scardello Artisan Cheese offers more than 150 varieties of handcrafted cheese from America and Europe, along with state-sourced options. Sample and taste the assortment—think gooey Mont d'Or—and let them cut your choice fresh (and straight!) from the wheel. scardellocheese.com

4

5 Sissy's Southern Kitchen & Bar is now selling owner Lisa Garza-Selcer's housemade canned jellies. Snag jalapeno or strawberry jellies (flavors depend on the season) after enjoying that locally famous fried chicken. Jars come in two sizes. sissysouthernkitchen.com

Double Date The new best date spot just so happens to be the best old date spot: the Village Theatre in Highland Park Village. The upper level of the former Marquee restaurant has been split in two. On the right: Toko V, chef Andre Natera's new Asian-American sushi and noodle resto. On the left: the Marquee bar, where the after-dinner crowd gathers on Saturday nights to groove to DJ Steffi Burns' tunes in what has become the coolest lounge and dance venue in Dallas. toko-v.com; hpvillagekitchen.com

Inside Out New resto Savor Gastropub has one of the best views of any restaurant in Dallas. Architect Tom Phifer's sparkling glass and steel design sits on a prime piece of Klyde Warren Park overlooking the green space and performance stage. It's an Instagram-ready, glass-walled jewel box where every buttery leather seat is a catbird counterpart. When the weather allows, skip to Savor's patio to sip a craft beer, a crisp cider or a glass of wine and take in the show. Or, if it's chilly, pick any inside seat—all are winners. Turns out, even in winter, the hottest spot to hang out is in a park built over a busy downtown expressway—who would have guessed? savor-relish.com

Love Field, With Love Refurbished from top to bottom, Love Field is now flying high as home to several upscale restaurants like Stephan Pyles' Sky Canyon, a miniature version of Pyles' much-loved Star Canyon, and Robert Columbo's Cru Wine Bar, which have enticed us to arrive at the airport much earlier. We love the chili at Sky Canyon, especially after a glass (or two) of cabernet at Cru. We'll skip Wataburger, but we can't pass on Campisi's thin-crust pizzas. dallas-lovefield.com
